WEDNESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 6, 1869.

A Southern Pacific Railroad.

It is hard to believe that the Pacific Railroad,-at one moment denounced as a gigantic swindle, and the next lauded as the great work which is to fill the measure of national prosperity,-was deliberately constructed so far north as to be of comparatively little value to the South, or that sectional feeling and hatred of the Southern people dictated its unfavorable situation And yet, if reliance may be placed upon the statements of a trustworthy Radical journal-the Cincinnati Commercial-we can hardly come to any other conclusion. The Commercial says that a Pacific Railroad, to be central, must run in latitude 36° 80'. But the Pacific Railroad begins at Omaha. in latitude 41° 20', crosses Nebraska, Wyoming, Dakotah and Utah north of latitude 42°, trends to the southwest in Nevada, and diverges from its meridian about two hundred miles, in order to reach San Francisco. The Commercial then riddles the whole scheme in this wise:

For four-fifths of its entire length it is far For four-fifths of its entire length it is far north of the meridian of San Francisco. It must be subject to violent snow storms for several months every year. It traverses a desert across western Nebraska, across Wyoming, across Dakota, across Utah, and thence passes into the Great Basin, one of the most absolute alkaline wastes on the globe—a plateau where all the streams sink into the barren sands, where the wretched Indians live on grass seed, and decent drinking water is unknown. Crossing Nevada, the railroad threads the Sierra range, winding through Donner Lake Pass, where wet, soggy snow falls nine or ten feet in a single storm; and where the writer last August stood beside the track making snow balls from huge banks that never writer last August stood beside the track making snow balls from huge banks that never wholly melt away. All who have persenally examined the route will say that the perils of winter travel over the Central Pacific Railroad of California through Donner Pass, are so palpably great that no man will incur them who is not foolhardy. The Nebraska end of the road has icy terrors to contend with that are only less repulsive than those pertaining to travel acress the Sierra during the average winter. The California end is building snow sheds and the Nebraska end snow walls. Neither snow shed nor snow wall can stand before the mountain avalanches that sweep down giant trees tain avalanches that sweep down giant trees and huge masses of stone as if they were fag-

These being facts, it is not strange that the Commercial declares that the Congress infernal, epileptic and savage as the antics of of the United States has spent fifty million dollars and given away twenty-one million place at Chicago. Plineis; Boston and Spring- acres of laun to build a Pacific Railread south of the Lake cities, which is indire in reaching San Francisco, and unquestion-ably unsafe for nearly half the year. Radical though it be in its politics, the magistrates and securing the elevation to their | Commercial does not hesitate to intimate to aid in righting these wrongs. "Three-"fourths of the States" are said to lie south of the worthless read. And, says the Commercial, "whatever may have "been the status of the Southern States "during the war, it will hardly be de-"nied that they are in the nation now. "The Northern States that adjoin them are "not disposed to view the South as a region "permanently given over to poverty, po-"litical intolerance, and hateful social ex-"clusiveness. Time is mending these evils, "and the chain of central States are no "longer willing to be considered as bound-"ing the republic on the south. That, hap-"pily, is once more the function of the Gulf "of Mexico."

These are cheering words; and we continue our quetation:

We have not heard that grass is growing in We have not heard that grass is growing in the streets of Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, New Orleans, Memphis, Nashville, Charleston, Richmond, Savannah and Mobile; but we are sure these cities are not content to be sneered at by Chicago because they must pour into that petted entrepot in order to journey over a government enterprise to reach the metropolis on the Pacific that is in about the same latitude as Norfolk Va. As well might the covering the same latitude as Norfolk Va. As well might the covering the same latitude as Norfolk Va. As well might the covering the same latitude as Norfolk Va. on the Pacific that is in about the same lati-tude as Norfolk, Va. As well might the gov-ernment in former days have built a railroad beginning at Buffalo, to accommodate the na-tional travel to Norfolk, as to have planted the great route to San Francisco in the latitude of the lakes. The country at large would have been as conveniently served in one instance as it will be in the other, and a good deal securer against the death of passengers by freezing or starvation.

Our first Pacific Railway is a mortifying geo-Our first Pacific Railway is a mortifying geo-graphical blunder. To sanction another still further north would be a crime against com-mon sense, decent fairness, and human life itself. To refuse to construct a central and competing Pacific Railroad that can be run all the year round, and along a meridian where snow seldom falls, and never to great depth, will be to make as damaging a sectional error as was ever committed under the old reign of the slaveholders. What we advocate is a road to which all the States. North and South, may to which all the States, North and South, may equally stretch out their iron arms, and so keep the cadence step of national progress un-broken. We feel no jealousy of the Northwest. What we want is justice and impartiality to all sections of our reknitted republic; and under those conditions may the best States and the

those conditions may the best States and the best cities win.

The only Pacific Railroad project that has the merit of being central to the whole country, is the continuation of the Union Pacific Railway, eastern division, which is now completed to the western line of Kansas, and has surveyed the rest of its route to California via New Mexico and Arizons. That road must go through for many and most conclusive reasons.

The Rise in Cotton.

It must be a source of satisfaction to all who desire a speedy restoration of prosperity to these Southern States, to notice the commanding position which most of her staples occupy in price. The enormous crops which her prolific seil sent forth in former days enabled manufacturers and consumers to manage values very much to suit themselves, giving the Southern planter, for a number of years, the humblest reward for the results of his intelligence and industry; but with the change in the labor system a decrease in the production occurred which has, to a great degree, placed the regulation of prises in the hands of the grower, and will enable him, by judicious management, to ax the value of his pro-

THE DAILY NEWS. Of course everything was quiet when he reach- ducts on a better basis than has heretofore ed there, and the negroes were peaceable, been the case. This is particularly true of the great staple cotton, the yield of which CHARLESTON THEATRE. has been reduced to an amount about onehalf of what it was just before the war, which heavy loss to the world has undoubtedly, for the present, or until the loss can be somewhat regained, given the American planter a power over its price which he never before pessessed. The experience of the present year has tended strongly to strengthen this view; but buyers, with few exceptions, generally expected low rates in December and January, and large operations were made at the commencement of the fall, for cotton to be delivered, at figures which inflict a heavy loss on those who sold. At Liverpool and Manchester the movements of trade have been such as to depress the commedity; but notwithstanding these unfavorable symptoms elsewhere, prices here continue to go up steadily, and in this market yesterday the article advanced a half to one cent per pound; and strict middling cotton was sold at 27 cents, while sellers at New York were offering about the same quality at 271 cents. This shows the Charleston market to be about the best in the country for sellers of cotton.

THERE WAS a ludioreus, though self-evident, blunder, in the article on the real estate tax, published in THE NEWS of yesterday. The sentence, "Indeed, it seems "somewhat absurd that the committee "should only estimate the tax on gross "sales to produce seventy thousand dollars, "which would be the tax upon a tetal sales "of $1,400,000," should read * * "which "would be the tax upon a total sales of '$14.000.000."

THE ESTIMATE of the Committee of Ways and Means of the amount to be realized from the tax on gross sales and sales of cotton, is as fellows:

Gross sales of merchandise, &c., $8,000,-000, at ½ per cent..........$40,000 Sales of cotton, $12,000,000, at ½ per cent. 30,000

Total....$70,000

THE ROUND TABLE comes to us this week with a vignette of Justice on the title page, and we find that the arrangement of the reading matter has been altered so that there are but two, instead of three, columns on the inside pages. The chess department is begun, and promises to be of interest to the knights of the chequer. We do not think othat the Reund Table has gained by the change which has been made in its external appearance; but we know that it retains the fire, the wit, and the manly independence which, together with its acknowledged ability, have left it without a rival in the ranks of our periodical
